What are your comments regarding this site?:

This site is in direct view of Sir Walter Scott's home at Abbotsford, a site of great importance to national heritage, and the home of one of the great historical champions of the Scottish and British landscape. His influence is of global importance, as is the importance of Abbotsford and its surrounds. This very website is branded with a photo of the Eildon hills, made famous through the legacy of Scott, and as of today left undeveloped and protected as they were in Scott's time. The surrounds of Abbotsford should be treated no differently. I strongly oppose this development, particularly given that there are many other suitable alternative sites available for similar projects.
