Quick Comment:

To Whom it May Concern,

Dear Sir/Madam,

I've made Scotland my home after moving here from Australia over twenty years ago. Scotland is a beautiful country with a rich heritage and therefore has its own particular and unique place in the world. With Edinburgh becoming the first UNESCO City of Literature and the completion of the Border's railway, Abbotsford House links to the wider world were strengthened. It has been a very successful destination and its value to the local community continues to grow.

I love walking in the footsteps of Scotland's great writers whose works still have such power and resonance. One of the best things is still being able to view the world as Walter Scott did. The places where you can imagine the past is getting smaller as the modern world encroaches on these unique places. Movies can digitally remove these encroachments but the real experience cannot. Please, we must look after these visual museums for our future generations' imaginations. Hopefully we can build these homes (which we definitely need) on another location?

Yours sincerely,

Mrs Jo Watt
