Question 7

Housing agree?:

I object to further proposals for more urban development in the Tweed Valley around Glentress. One of the great attractions of Glentress as a destination is that it feels like it is out in the country and the approach has an attractive ambience. The approach from the south has already been spoiled by the new housing and an unattractive hotel - both of which are completely out of character for their setting. Further proposed development, particularly on the scale suggested for the Eshiels area near the entrance to Glentress, feels like further urbanisation of this beautiful location which will hugely detract from its attraction as a destination for visitors. Do not presume that mountain bikers will continue to come, irrespective of what you let happen to the setting for Glentress. People will start choosing other destinations for their attempt to get away from city life.
